CATT AT A GLANCE...

Established in 1994, the Centre for Advancement of Trenchless Technologies (CATT) located at the University of Waterloo in Ontario, Canada is a grouping of educational, municipal, industrial, business and federal representatives committed to the advancement of knowledge, techniques, materials, methods, and equipment used in Trenchless technology.

Geographically, the centre serves Canada and the northern United States. A board of Directors (the majority from the private sector) aid in the development of research programs, and educational/technology transfer programs.
